The Mighty Meatball: Which one will reign supreme?
Find out at
The 2nd Annual Great Meatball Match Up
A Competition for Amateur and Professional Chefs
Presented by the American Swedish Historical Museum
and the South Philly Review
Sunday, October 23rd, 2011 4pm-6pm

Meatballs are a popular treat in many different cultures and are common in the cuisines of over a dozen nations, including Sweden. Join ASHM and the South Philly Review for our second annual Meatball Contest on October 23, 2011. We are inviting members of the public, as well as local restaurants, to serve up their potentially prize winning meatballs.

Attendees and local contestants will be able to taste and vote for the Best Professional meatball, and a special panel of judges will choose the best amongst the Amateurs' entries. So come and see whose meatballs are the greatest of them all. Fun and deliciousness is guaranteed! For information on how to become a contestant, check our website, www.americanswedish.org or call (215) 389-1776.

Participating restaurants include:

Villa di
Roma®

village belle

Joey Joe's
Deli & Prime Meats

DAD'S STUFFING'S

Admission is $8 for adults, $6 for seniors and students, and $4 for ages 4-12, children under 4 are free. Bread will be served along with the meatballs, and beverages will be available for purchase.

The American Swedish Historical Museum is located in scenic FDR Park at 1900 Pattison Avenue in South Philadelphia near the Sports Complex. Plenty of free parking is available. For those taking public transportation, the Broad Street Subway's AT&T/Pattison Avenue stop is within walking distance, or SEPTA's Route 17 (Naval Base) can bring you right to the Museum.
