Pippi Longstocking Is Here to Stay! at the American Swedish Historical Museum On View Now

Philadelphia, PA- It is with extraordinary delight that we announce the re-opening of our much loved Do You Know Pippi Longstocking? exhibit. Since it opened in March of 2014, the museum has frequently been filled with the sounds of children laughing and playing, as they explore the exhibit itself, but also as they discover the very popular Pippi Gallery Hunt, which leads them through the rest of the museum.

While the special exhibition gallery bid farewell to Pippi on February 16, as of March 1st she has occupied a new space in the museum, so kids and families can enjoy playing with Pippi and most of the original exhibit components for years to come. Kids can cook up some fun in Villa Villekulla, discover treasures in the Thing Finding cabinet, or imagine themselves as something new with the dress up trunk. So please come and play with Pippi any time you wish!

For more information on the ASHM's upcoming programs and events, please visit americanswedish.org, email info@americanswedish.org, or call (215) 389-1776.

The American Swedish Historical Museum is located in scenic FDR Park at 1900 Pattison Avenue in South Philadelphia near the Sports Complex. Plenty of free parking is available. For those taking public transportation, the Broad Street Subway's AT&T/Pattison Avenue stop is within walking distance or SEPTA's Route 17 (Naval Base) can bring you right to the Museum.
